

FOUNDING DECLARATION

GLOBAL FOOD SECURITY INITIATIVE 2050

Document No.: FD-2026-001

Official Edition: Version 1.0

Date of Issue: 01 July 2026

Founding Preamble

The twenty-first century is witnessing profound global transformations that have created unprecedented challenges for global food systems. Rapid population growth, climate change, increasing pressure on natural resources, disruptions to supply chains, economic volatility, and humanitarian crises have collectively elevated food security to one of the world's foremost strategic priorities.

Recognizing that food security is a shared global responsibility, and that addressing these challenges requires stronger international cooperation, long-term vision, mutual respect, innovation, responsible investment, and institutional collaboration, the Global Food Security Initiative 2050 has been launched as an open international framework dedicated to advancing sustainable global food systems and strengthening cooperation among partners at the national, regional, and international levels.

The Initiative does not seek to replace existing national efforts or international initiatives. Rather, it aims to complement and strengthen them by providing a collaborative platform for dialogue, knowledge exchange, and the development of practical solutions to current and future challenges, while fully respecting national sovereignty, national priorities, international law, and the Sustainable Development Goals.

The Initiative believes that building a more secure and sustainable future requires the development of global food systems that are more resilient, efficient, adaptive, and inclusive. Such systems should be driven by knowledge, innovation, good governance, responsible investment, and international partnerships, contributing to economic prosperity, social stability, and the sustainable management of natural resources for present and future generations.

Accordingly, this Founding Declaration formally announces the launch of the Global Food Security Initiative 2050 as an international platform for cooperation and collective action. The Initiative invites governments, international organizations, financial institutions, development banks, sovereign wealth funds, the private sector, universities, research institutions, civil society organizations, and development partners to contribute to building a more sustainable global food future founded on shared responsibility, cooperation, innovation, and respect for the diversity of national priorities and development needs.

Vision of the Declaration

To establish this Founding Declaration as the institutional foundation of the Global Food Security Initiative 2050, serving as the starting point for a shared global vision that places international cooperation at the heart of advancing sustainable global food systems, strengthening food security, and building a more prosperous, resilient, and sustainable future for humanity.
